My father is a doctor. He is a surgeon. He works at a large hospital in the surgical department. He works very hard. His work begins at nine. When he comes to the hospital he goes to his wards to examine his patients. He asks the ward nurse about the post-operative condition of his patients. She often tells him that there are no post-operative reactions. And sometimes she tells the doctor that the temperature of some of the postoperative patients is high and some of them have a swelling. The surgeon gives necessary instructions to the nurse and goes to the operating-room. He operates three days a week. Great care is taken to make sure that operations take place in sterile conditions – free from microorganisms. The surgeon and his or her assistant wash and put on surgical gowns, masks, and gloves. The patient's skin is prepared by disinfecting it with an antiseptic solution. This is known as preparing the patient. They are then covered with sterile drapes, so that only the area of the operation is exposed. I had my practice at the hospital and learnt much about surgical nursing, about the dressings of wounds and about the duties of a surgical nurse.
